Preface

When we reflect that the Argonauts of the late 50's found the territory of Colorado a wilderness of mountain and plain, and that in forty-four years it is transformed into a great commonwealth teeming with life and industry, one of the fairest daughters in the sisterhood of states, it seems most fitting that the portraits of these men of the nineteenth century, through whose tireless energy this transformation has been wrought, whose efforts have caused the desert to "blossom as the rose," should be gathered together, as many as possible, and perpetuated and saved for the gratification of generations yet to come, and to this end for nearly two years we have been compiling this work.

At first thought, to the uninitiated, this might seem to be a simple task, but when the fact is taken into consideration that over eight hundred of the portraits that appear in this work were made from sittings given especially for us by busy men, that many of the pioneers have long since joined the great majority, and their portraits were obtained with the greatest difficulty, some of the obstacles that were presented and overcome will be easily understood.

As absolute perfection does not exist in this world, we do not claim to have reached it in this case, but we have the satisfaction of knowing that we have left no stone unturned to make this collection as complete as it was possible to be.

As will be noticed, there is no attempt at a biographical sketch. Below each name will be found a brief title or description, and for the sake of uniformity this is limited, so that in some cases many of the business interests or offices held had to be omitted for want of space, otherwise it would have resulted in a book of biographies, rather than a large collection of portraits; enough data is furnished, however, for all practical purposes. The portraits are as a rule exceedingly fine, except in a few cases where good photographs were unobtainable.

They are classified by professions or trades, and in addition are indexed alphabetically, so that while there are ten hundred and eighty-seven portraits in the book, a subject is easily found.

The work cannot fail to grow in value, because it is a de luxe edition limited to one thousand volumes, and no future edition possible, as the copper plates from which these half-tones were printed are out of the publishers' possession, having been delivered to the subscribers.

As the years go by, we are growing rapidly away from the formative period of the state, and a duplicate work, if such a thing were attempted, would be yearly a greater undertaking, and inasmuch as we have aimed to give the work an historical value, have incorporated within its pages many portraits of those without whose names no history of Colorado could be written. The state is full of surprises, and our own experience well illustrates the assertion.

Our first copper plates were made east, as we took it for granted the work could be done better and cheaper there than in Colorado, but we eventually discovered that the Williamson-Haffner Engraving Company of Denver could duplicate both work and prices, and so gave Denver the preference; but still a greater surprise was in store for us! There are few firms east who care to undertake to bind a book as elegantly as this is bound, and when arrangements were about concluded with a New York bindery, we found that The Merchants Publishing Company of Denver could do anything that could be done in their line, and at eastern prices, and we have no doubt it is so in nearly every other line.

It is with pleasure that we assure our subscribers that they have a simon-pure Colorado book, engraved, printed and bound in Denver.

The almost undiscovered, unihabited territory of 1858 is able, in forty-four years, to compete with the world, not only in mining, agriculture and stock raising, but in mercantile and manufacturing lines as well, and this book contains the portraits of ten hundred and eighty-seven men who have helped to bring this seeming miracle about.

While it is true not all, whose portraits appear, were here to assist at the laying of the keel of this grand ship of state, yet we are sure there are none that have not labored earnestly and well for its ultimate success, and we know you will enjoy studying its pages, for Pope has said :

Know then thyself, presume not God to scan,
The proper study of mankind is man.
